Mr. Emberry of WYBC has asked me to say a few words to the students of Yale University. I am delighted to extend you greetings from the Central Intelligence Agency which contains many of your graduates in important positions. Intelligence is a new career in our Government. It is an important career for college graduates who are dedicated to doing something for our Government. The rate of pay in the CIA follows the Civil Service schedule so people do not come to us for financial gain but mainly because they want to help America. We are always looking for the best personnel the academic world has to offer. Interested graduates and students can request application blanks for employment directly from CIA, Washington 25, D. C. In addition to academic standing there are physical and psychiatric tests to be passed as well as security checks before one is accepted for employment. I might mention that Dr. Sherman Kent, Chief of our Office of National Estimates was a Professor of History at Yale and there are many others who find CIA work a very satisfying experience.

Release taken with SJG in person for possible use by the Director over WYBC, February 3, 1958.
